The Eternal One spoke to Moses, saying:

Tell the Israelite people to bring Me gifts; you shall accept gifts for Me from every person whose heart is so moved.

And these are the gifts that you shall accept from them: gold, silver, and copper; blue, purple, and crimson yarns, fine linen, goats' hair; tanned ram skins, dolphin skins, and acacia wood; oil for lightening, spices for the anointing oil and for the aromatic incense; lapis lazuli and other stones for setting, for the ephod and for the breastpiece. And let them make Me a sanctuary that I may dwell among them. Exactly as I show you—the pattern of the Tabernacle and the pattern of all its furnishings—so shall you make it.
The Eternal gave Solomon wisdom, as promised. There was peace between Hiram and Solomon, and the two of them made a treaty.

King Solomon drafted 30,000 men from all over Israel as forced labor.

He sent them by relays of 10,000 to Lebanon; each group worked there one month and stayed home for two. Adoniram was in charge of the labor force.

Solomon employed 70,000 who carried the loads and 80,000 quarry workers in the hill country, apart from the 3,300 foremen responsible for the assigned tasks, who directed the people engaged in the work.

By the king’s command they cut large blocks of costly stone, in order to lay the foundation of the temple with ashlar.
